ORGANISATION OF STUDIES

COURSE PRESENTATION

The curriculum at Beaux-Arts de Paris offers a grounding in both artistic approaches and issues in art today. Learning is founded on practical independent studio work, under the guidance of a renowned artist. Studio work is a central and fundamental basis for student development.

Drawing classes, considered as cross-disciplinary and complementary to studio practice, constitute a common core for 1st and 2nd year students.

As of the 2nd year of study, students choose courses in techniques / skills according to their artistic practice. Courses in different techniques are offered in the Printmaking / Bookmaking, Materials / Space and Foundation Skills Departments.

Extensive access is given to new technologies and their impact on the creation and distribution of art today through digital, photography and video classes.

Significant importance is given to theoretical courses, which are a fundamental element in student learning.

Foreign language learning is included as a mandatory part of the curriculum throughout the course programme. The Beaux-Arts de Paris course is supplemented by a professional internship or a study abroad programme in the fourth year.

In the 5th year, students attend seminars as part of the preparation for the National Fine Arts Degree (equivalent Master of Arts).

EXCHANGE PROGRAMME

All courses are available to exchange students, subject to availability, except for research and degree seminars, and language courses other than French as a foreign language.

The School is structured into studios (ateliers), technical courses and theory courses, which represent distinct artistic disciplines and pedagogical approaches. Exchange students are expected to build their course plan by selecting course units (CU), in accordance with the curriculum below:

- Studio CU: 16 ECTS
- Technical CU: 6 ECTS
- Theory or Technical CU: 6 ECTS
- Language CU: 2 ECTS (French as a foreign language is mandatory for non-French speaking students)

TYPES OF CU VALIDATED

- Studio CU

The Department of Artistic Practice includes around thirty studios under the responsibility of artist-teachers. Studios are a space for artistic practice, creation and experimentation. They are also a space for debate, exchange and criticism. They transform into exhibition spaces at certain times of the year, especially during the degree or assessment periods.

Studios are a dedicated space where students at all stages, from 1st year to 5th, work alongside each other, using multidisciplinary creative techniques under the guidance of a renowned artist. Combining individualized input and collective interaction, studio teaching aims to foster the artistic engagement of each student, gradually helping them to build their own individual artistic language.

The development of inter-studio relationships and critique sessions opens a space for dialogue and feeds reflection. The studio artist may invite an outside contributor to provide input during studio work. Study trips are sometimes organized. Group exhibition projects or interventions at external venues are often proposed by the studio artists, in collaboration with other institutions. Such projects provide an opportunity for students to experience issues regarding installation, spatial layout, communication, dissemination, and production/publication.

Every student must be registered for artistic practice in a studio. Students can stay in a single studio throughout the course or change according to the development of their work.

PRINTMAKING BOOKMAKING DEPARTMENT

TYPES OF CU VALIDATED

- Technical CU

Wernher Bouwens, Aurélie Pagès and Julien Sirjacq all have studios in the Printmaking/ Bookmaking Department. Their teaching shares the desire to approach bookmaking in its broadest sense, opening a space for reflection and experimentation in relation to printed art, publication and the production of multiples. Whether examining traditional practices or new technologies, the various fields of bookmaking are viewed as an opportunity for practice, experimentation and experience of functions and usages. There is a collegial structure to the department, but the teaching staff have all developed their own relationship to bookmaking and printmaking.

MATERIALS / SPACE DEPARTMENT

TYPES OF CU VALIDATED

- Technical CU

The Materials / Space Department offers a very rich range of courses as part of a direct approach to materials and creative techniques and different expressions of painting, sculpture and spatial installation. Collaborations with the School's different departments can be set up as desired, particularly with the Department of Artistic Practices.

Both in Saint-Germain-des-Prés and Saint-Ouen-sur-Seine, students have access to specific disciplines within the studios: mould making, carving, mosaics, and painting techniques. Within the department, student work takes the form of both research and artistic experimentation in the studio and participation in exhibitions, interventions, projects and performances. Visual artists, writers, scientists, researchers, architects, urban planners and other specialists who work in relation to the themes developed are invited as part of workshops that enrich student research.

The diversity of the experiences available helps to provide a rich and multifarious teaching environment that maintains motivation and is constantly renewed under the demands of artistic projects. In contact with these different mediums and the possibilities offered by different materials, students are able to learn about various practices and generate work that is specific and individual.

Led by artists or art technicians, skills workshops help students broaden the field of their personal work as of the second year and allow them to develop through the prism of mastery of different mediums, removing material barriers to their creation. Skills workshops constitute complementary technical support for the artistic practice work carried out in the studio.

THEORETICAL STUDIES DEPARTMENT

TYPES OF CU VALIDATED

- Lectures : Theoretical CU

Theoretical teaching at Beaux-Arts de Paris is founded with the conviction of “making students autodidacts”. Students are therefore offered as many opportunities as possible to broaden their knowledge. The history of art classes are designed to accompany 1st to 3rd year students and give them the means of interpreting all forms of art, whatever its provenance, whatever its period.

The theoretical teaching programme is also structured to help undergraduates come to terms with issues that are not solely confined to the field of art. Whether they be political, philosophical, scientific or societal, these issues represent an opportunity to stimulate students' curiosity, sharpen their critical faculties and feed their artistic practice.

Art history courses are designed to support students from their first to third years, equipping them with essential fundamentals to interpret art across all eras and origins confidently, rather than adhering strictly to standard chronological periods. Please note that theoretical courses are strictly reserved for students with at least a B1 level in French.

TEACHING STAFF

| Tristan Garcia, Christian Joschke, Jean-Yves Jouannais, Laura Karp-Lugo, Guitemie Maldonado, Sophie Marino, François-René Martin, Clélia Zernik.
